Abstracts

During 2019, US motor vehicle production saw growth, maintaining demand for metal products. Sales of new cars exceeded 17 million, as a result of low unemployment and strong consumer confidence. US carmakers lag behind their European peers in terms of modernisation and investment in production of electric vehicles (EVs), but their slow shift to EV production continues to support demand for EV battery-related metals, including lithium, zinc, nickel and copper. The aircraft industry also saw expan...
