Abstracts

This report is the seventh edition of the titanium dioxide series reports, published by CCM.

Undoubtly, China is the biggest country both in titanium dioxide production and consumption.

Nevertheless, along with tremendous growth in the past few years, the limitations are more and more obvious, coming from technology, product quality and environmental protection. Technology of chloride process in China is still poor and the core technology is monopolized by overseas enterprises. How do domestic enterprises develop the chloride process? In order to raise the product quality, what are they endeavoring to. As the pressure from environment becomes harder and harder, how do they handle their three waste treatment?

Thus, focusing on such spots, we have done broadly investigation and deeply analysis, and try to find out how Chinese enterprises overcome the obstacles and how the titanium dioxide industry will evolve in the near future. After a great deal of work, we have accumulated full-scale of information of the titanium dioxide industry and made some valuable conclusions. So by reading this report, you will come to know:
