Steam cleaners are electrical appliances that are mainly used to clean floors, rugs, and furniture by suction. With modern innovations, these steam cleaners are also used to clean garments. Different types of steam cleaners are available and are adopted depending on the surface to be cleaned. Due to developments in technology and improvements in the efficiency of these steam cleaners, the demand for these appliances is expected to increase during the forecast period. By end-users, the global steam cleaner market is dominated by the commercial segment, followed by the residential segment.

The rapid increase in the number of dual-income households is main factors contributing to the growth of market. This growth of dual income households reduces the time to carry out household chores and thus drives the demand for steam cleaners. As working women find it difficult to make time for performing the household chores, they prefer steam cleaning or other modes of vacuum cleaning. This change in lifestyle has augmented a market for steam cleaners across the region.
