About Lime Market

Lime is a commodity produced and consumed locally. Limestone is a substitute for lime in many applications, such as agriculture, fluxing, and sulfur removal. Limestone, which contains less reactive material, is slower to react and may have other disadvantages compared with lime, depending on the application; however, limestone is considerably less expensive than lime.

China is world leader in lime production: it manufactures over 60% of total output. USA supplies about 6% of world output, and it is the second largest result.
