About Tin Market

Most tin is used as a protective coating or as an alloy with other metals such as lead or zinc. Tin is used in coatings for steel containers, in solders for joining pipes or electrical/electronic circuits, in bearing alloys, in glass-making, and in a wide range of tin chemical applications. Secondary, or scrap tin is an important source of the tin supply.

China holds leading position both in mine and smelter tin production, controlling 44% and 39.5% of world market, respectively. Second place is occupied by Indonesia. World resources, principally in Western Africa, Southeastern Asia, Australia, Bolivia, Brazil, China, and Russia, are sufficient to sustain recent annual production rates well into the future.
