Abstracts

Cloud security is moderately growing in emerging markets of APAC while higher growth numbers are projected for the North American market. Middle-East and Africa still remain premature due to lack of customer awareness and inconsistent network infrastructure. However, with no surprise, Israel houses few of the major cloud security companies and been a power-house for research & development. Enterprise level customers look to put cloud security services on high priority due to the sensitivity of the data they deal within cloud. In a nutshell, with the growing attacks on cloud-based services and incidents of data breaches, cloud security has started to get importance and this trend is expected to go high in the years to come.

The report titled Global Cloud Security Market showcases an in-depth analysis of the overall cloud security market in terms of market size, segmentation for security service providers, end-users, geographies, security services, cloud environment, competition, market metrics and service provider analysis.

The report brings about a detailed description of the developed and emerging markets globally, service providers analysis bracketed as Enterprise/Small and Medium Businesses along with market across each service segment of cloud security (cloud IAM, SIEM, Email Security, Web Security, etc.) and cloud environment (public/private).
