Abstracts

Banana is one of the most popular fruit in the world. The industry is growing at a healthy rate for past some decades. Central America is one of the largest banana concentrate markets in the world. There is very less domestic demand hence much of the produced banana is exported in fruit form as well as in concentrate form. On the contrary, India is the largest producer and consumer of banana and its products globally. Due to high domestic demand, the fruit is not used for production of concentrates. Due to its nutritive and medicinal characteristics, the banana concentrate market is growing at a rapid pace. Banana concentrate preserves the natural flavor, color, and properties of banana. Mostly, the concentrate is stored in frozen form, due to which it is easier and cost effective to ship and store for longer duration. In the context of China-US trade war and global economic volatility and uncertainty, it will have a big influence on this market.
