Abstracts

Abbott Laboratories is a well-known pharmaceutical company that manufactures and sells generic pharmaceuticals, nutritionals, diagnostic products, and medical devices. The company is known worldwide for many renowned brands like Similac infant formula, the Ensure line of nutritional supplements, its FreeStyle diabetes care line, and its Xience drug-eluting stents. In 2017, the company acquired another renowned medical device manufacturer, St. Jude Medical.

In recent years, the company's strong financial performance, coupled with a diversified customer base, geographical diversification, and robust manufacturing capabilities, has ensured that its business keeps growing. The company has focused on building country-specific portfolios, especially developing its brands to meet the needs of patients in many emerging markets. Abbott has over 400 healthcare and pharmaceutical development projects that are active in many emerging markets.

The company's focus on molecular diagnostics has stood it in good stead during the COVID-19 pandemic. The company got emergency use authorization from the FDA to distribute nine COVID-19 rapid antigen tests. The company's BinaxNOW COVID-19 Ag Card test is one of the fastest available molecular tests for detecting the novel coronavirus.
