Abstracts

Once one of the most popular gambling sectors across Europe, the German casinos and gambling industry has been experiencing stagnation in the last couple of years. The market is expected to find it difficult to come out of this stage of stagnation in the forecast period up to 2022. The primary reason behind this stagnation has been the slow economic recovery of the Eurozone.

In spite of the traditional gambling channels experiencing stagnation, online gambling is surging ahead as people are preferring to gamble on the go on their smart devices.

One of the biggest changes in the German gambling industry happened in 2010, when the sector was opened up to 2010 following an EU ruling that the German government has to end its monopoly on gambling. The industry has, since then, opened up to competition.

It is expected that the German casinos and gambling industry will have a value of over $13.5 billion at the end of 2022.
