Abstracts

Japan is the leading market for industrial gases in Asia Pacific, with the country accounting for nearly 35% of the region's industrial gases market. The Japanese industrial gas market is characterized by the presence of large, diversified international companies. The presence of such powerful incumbents' acts as a significant barrier to entry and the need for substantial initial investment to set up high volume production plants also reduces the threat of new companies in the Japanese industrial gas market from establishing themselves in this market. Merchant gases is the largest segment of the industrial gases market in Japan.

The future of the industrial gas market in Japan is predicted to be good and the coming years will definitely bring significant growth in the sector.

Biggest players in the industry are Praxair, Inc., Air Water Inc., Air Liquide SA and Taiyo Nippon Sanso Corporation.
