Activated carbon production has been growing recently, mainly in Asia, Europe and North America. A number of new plants have been started; large manufacturers have introduced new capacity.

Activated carbon demand has been also increasing stimulated by the growth in downstream markets (water treatment, air purification, pharmaceutical and medical sector). The highest consumption levels are demonstrated by US and China, followed by Germany and Japan.

Russia is a major producer and consumer of activated carbon among CIS countries. After 2011 introduction of tariffs against import from China Russian market recovered from stagnation noticed before when cheap activated Chinese carbon partly drove out locally produced product.

Russia is the main supplier of activated carbon to CIS countries markets.
