About Great Western Land and Recreation Inc.

Great Western Land and Recreation, Inc. engages in the development, marketing, sale, and financing of residential and recreational property in the southwestern United States. The company owns approximately 10,000 acres of land in Arizona, Texas, and New Mexico.

The company's properties are located in Arizona, Texas and New Mexico and consist of a variety of lifestyle choices including townhomes and condominiums for first-time homebuyers, vacant lots for commercial homebuilders and ranch lots for those seeking recreational and investment properties. The company has developed various subdivision projects in the Houston area, with additional subdivision projects in various stages of development. Subdivided residential lots are marketed principally to builders seeking to build homes in quality residential settings in the low- to mid-price range.

The company's ranch properties are marketed to purchasers seeking a long-term investment in up-scale vacant ranch land. In addition, the company engages in ranching and agricultural activities on some of its properties until the properties are either developed or sold. These activities include the planting of tree farms, and the leasing of ranch property for cattle grazing. The company offers financing on individual purchases of ranch lots. The majority of these loans are then sold to third parties.
