About KBR, Inc.

KBR, Inc. operates as an engineering, construction, and services company supporting the energy, hydrocarbon, government services, minerals, civil infrastructure, power and industrial sectors.

Business Units

The company offers a range of services through six business units; Government and Infrastructure (G&I);

Upstream; Services; Downstream; Technology; and Ventures.

Downstream

The Downstream business unit serves clients in the petrochemical, refining, coal gasification, and syngas markets, executing projects throughout the world. Downstream's work with KBR's Ventures business unit has resulted in equity participation structures, such as its Egypt Basic Industries Corporation Ammonia plant which offers its customers solutions to meet their project development needs. The company is a contractor in the markets that it serves delivering projects through various service offerings, including front-end engineering design (FEED), detailed engineering, engineering, procurement and construction (EPC), engineering, procurement and construction management (EPCM), and program management.

Government and Infrastructure

The G&I business unit provides program and project management, contingency logistics, operations and maintenance, construction management, engineering, and other services to military and civilian branches of governments and private clients worldwide. It delivers on-demand support services across the military mission cycle from contingency logistics and field support to operations and maintenance on military bases. The company designs, constructs, maintains, and operates and manages civil infrastructure projects ranging from airport, rail, highway, water and wastewater facilities, and mining and mineral processing to regional development programs and major events. It provides these services to foreign governments, such as the United Kingdom and Australia.

Services

The Services business unit delivers engineering, construction, construction management, fabrication, maintenance, and turnaround expertise to customers worldwide. It serves power, alternate energy, pulp and paper, industrial and manufacturing, and pharmaceutical industries in addition to its base markets in the oil, gas, oil sands, petrochemicals, and hydrocarbon processing industries. The company provides commercial building construction services to education, food and beverage, healthcare, hospitality and entertainment, life science and technology, and mixed use building clients through its Building Group. KBR Services and its joint venture partner offer maintenance, small capital construction, and drilling support services for offshore oil and gas producing facilities in the Bay of Campeche through the use of semisubmersible vessels.

Technology

The Technology business unit offers differentiated process technologies, including value-added technologies in the coal monetization, petrochemical, refining, and syngas markets. The company offers technology licenses, and, in conjunction with its downstream business unit, offers project management and engineering, procurement and construction for integrated solutions worldwide.

Upstream

The Upstream business unit provides a range of services for upstream projects, including liquefied natural gas (LNG), gas-to-liquids (GTL), onshore oil and gas production facilities, offshore oil and gas production facilities, including platforms, floating production and subsea facilities, and onshore and offshore pipelines. In gas-to-liquids, the company is constructing two gas-to-liquids projects. Its upstream business unit has designed and constructed onshore facility and pipeline projects. In oil & gas, the company provides integrated engineering and program management solutions for offshore production facilities and subsea developments.

Ventures

The Ventures business unit's purpose is to help its customers realize completed projects. The Ventures business unit invests KBR equity alongside clients' equity in projects where one or more of KBR's other business units has a direct role in engineering, construction, construction management, or operations and maintenance. The Ventures business uni
