About Surflect Holdings Inc.

Surflect Holdings, Inc., together with its subsidiary, Surflect Technologies, Inc., develops automated electroplating tools for the solar energy and semiconductor power management device industries in the United States. The company, provides metallization, interconnect, and module process and tool solutions for Solar Cell, LED, and power management applications.

Products and Services

The company provides conventional electroplating while providing process control and eliminating the barrier to technician and operator training and process knowledge with a repeatable software recipe driven computer plating chamber.

The company has developed two hardware-plating technologies and subsequent tool platforms to support specific solar cell fabrication, and solar module assembly in a 'Back End of Line' (BEOL) environment. Each tool provides users with a controlled production platform using a single tool for development and scaling 8-10 tools in a line to provide typical 1500-2000 wafers per hour volume throughput.

The company's Solary tool Technology is a patented multi-cell volume platform technology with various technical features fundamentally distinguishing it from traditional wafer-level plating technologies. The Solary utilizes a single wafer closed cell with a primarily horizontal plating operation that hold approximately 50 wafers per tool.

Competition

The company's competitors include Technic, Schmid Technology Systems GmbH, Rena GmbH, and Process Automation International Limited (PAL).

History

Surflect Holding Inc. was incorporated in 2000.
