The arms and ammunition market in Colombia has exhibited a high growth in the recent past. Factors such as conflict with Venezuela, failure to implement strict gun control, displaced people relying on subsistence hunting for survival are the key growth drivers for the market. The competitive landscape includes players from different geographies having global distribution networks in Colombia. Factors, such as cost, innovation and development, and ease of accessibility have been significant for gaining growth in the arms and ammunition market in Colombia. Additionally, increased demand for small arms and ammunition for purposes such as hunting, sporting, and self-defense is expected to drive the growth of small arms and ammunition during the forecast period.
