Presently, the UAS Traffic management (UTM) system market is in its development phase. There are number of factors that are pushing towards the need for a UTM architecture. This includes increased adoption of drones, emerging regulations for the UTM system, and developments of the key stakeholders that are working together for developing a common UTM system. Furthermore, lucrative business opportunities are expected to emerge for different stakeholders with the UTM system replacing the existing air traffic management (ATM) for both manned and unmanned aviation.

Some of the key stakeholders involved in UAS traffic management system market are, UAS Service Supplier (USS), Commercial Drone Operator, Communication System Provider, Data Service Provider, Law Enforcement, and Air Navigation Service Provider (ANSP). Among all the stakeholders, the role of USS will play the central part in the UTM systems market and it is also one of the biggest investable opportunities for companies in the overall UTM eco-system. By analysis, if becomes fully operational, the global UAS traffic management systems market has the potential to generate over $3 billion of revenue by the year 2026.
