Furthermore, the aged population is expected to grow by about 18 million between 2020 and 2030, according to statistics. There has been a rise in the number of dental implants and oral operations performed as a consequence of the ageing population. There is also a decline in manual dexterity, as well as an increase in comorbidity and medicines that affect the oral cavity. as per Statista, in August 2020, close to 31 percent of respondents in Japan aged 60 to 69 years old attended dental clinics once in two to three months before February 2020. Furthermore, Many population-based surveys in the United States and Germany indicate that the elderly population has a high risk of dental caries. As a result, it has been discovered that the number of old individuals is quickly increasing in all industrialized nations, leading to the growth of the dental equipment market. However, High Cost of Test for Fully Automated Analyzers, may impede market growth over the
