Abstracts

Natural Surfactants taken directly from the natural sources such animals, plants as are also referred bio surfactants. Natural surfactants have low toxicity as compared to synthetic surfactants and are biodegradable. Stringent government regulation with the use of conventional surfactants coupled with growing end use industries are two driving forces of the market growth. For instance, the protection and safety of surfactant products are regulated by U.S. EPA and other deferral and local agencies. In addition, the use of these surfactants food processing application is regulated by the FDA and other environmental regulation such as clean water act, clean air act toxic substance control act are also restricting the conventional surfactants thus driving the adoption of natural surfactants over conventional surfactants.

The regional analysis of global Natural surfactants market is considered for the key regions such as Asia Pacific, North America, Europe, Latin America and Rest of the World. Europe is the leading region across the world in terms of market share owing to increasing demand for natural surfactants in different applications such as personal care, detergent and oilfield chemicals. North America also contributes a satisfactory growth in the global Natural surfactants market due to rising concern regarding environment protection. Asia-Pacific is also anticipated to exhibit highest growth rate over the forecast period 2019-2026 owing to the growth in demand for natural surfactants from developing countries such as India, China and Japan. Coupled with growing demand for cosmetics and grooming in the personal care application.
