Abstracts

Global Synoptophore Market is valued approximately at USD 217.25 billion in 2020 and is anticipated to grow with a healthy growth rate of more than 4.6% over the forecast period 2021-2027. Synoptophore is a specialized diagnosis and correction device used to cure strabismus, often known as squint, in the eyes. Strabismus is caused by an imbalance in the muscle that regulates eye movement. As a result, the eye alignment is set out, and the condition of eye turning out (diverge) or eye turning in develops (converge). It can also occur as a result of hypertropia or hypotropia. Some of the primary factors driving the market's growth include the rising incidence of visual acuity diseases such as amblyopia, strabismus, diplopia, and other convergence insufficiency ailments. Amblyopia affects around 1-5 percent of the world's population, according to the American Academy of Ophthalmology. Furthermore, Increasing prevalence of ocular disorder propel the market in the upcoming years. For instance, According to Dovepress's current estimates, 285 million individuals worldwide are impacted by vision disabilities, including 39 million blind persons and 246 million with subnormal vision.. However, availability of alternative diagnostic device may impede market growth over the forecast period of 2021-2027.

North America had the highest revenue share and anticipated to continue during the projection period. Its largest market share is due to the existence of significant market players, the rising prevalence of strabismus and amblyopia, and the growing preference for non-surgical treatment techniques. However, Europe accounted for a significant portion of the market share and is anticipated to continue to expand at a considerable rate during the forecast period. The expanding number of local manufacturers of ocular diagnostic devices, as well as increased awareness of sophisticated technologies in ophthalmic care, are likely to propel the market further.
