Abstracts

Global Xanthan Gum Market is valued at approximately USD 428.4 million in 2021 and is anticipated to grow with a healthy growth rate of more than 5.7% over the forecast period 2022-2028. Xanthan gum is a microbial polysaccharide that is utilized as a thickener in a variety of sectors including food and beverages, cosmetics, and pharmaceuticals. Other names for it include bacterial polysaccharide and maize sugar gum. Corn sugar is fermented with a bacteria called Xanthomonas Campestris to produce xanthan gum. Xanthan gum also reduces sugar absorption in the digestive tract and acts like saliva to moisten the lips of those suffering from Sjogren's syndrome. Xanthan gums are also employed in oil and gas industry. The baking and confectionery sector accounts for the majority of xanthan gum demand. The market growth is driven by key factors such as increase in demand for gluten-free food products and increase in consumption of convenience foods. Gluten is a kind of protein present in wheat, rye, and barley that has been the subject of much debate in recent years. Although gluten is commonly linked with bread and baked products, it may also be present in a variety of other foods and beverages. For instance, between 2020 and 2025, the worldwide market for gluten-free food is predicted to grow significantly, from USD 5.6 billion to USD 8.3 billion. However, guar gum as a substitute for Xanthan Gum impedes the growth of the market over the forecast period of 2022-2028.

The key regions considered for the global Xanthan Gum Market study include Asia Pacific, North America, Europe, Latin America, and Rest of the World. Asia Pacific is dominating the global market share owing to rising standard of living, and expansion of
