Abstracts

Impact of COVID-19 on Alcohol Disinfectants Market is valued approximately USD XX million in 2019 and is anticipated to grow with a healthy growth rate of more than XX% over the forecast period 2019-2026. The growing demand for alcohol-based disinfectants such as hand sanitizers owing to the surge in COVID 19 epidemic coupled with the rising awareness towards health hygiene has propelled the growth of alcohol-based disinfectants. Moreover, various chemical firms are moving production at plants around the world to satisfy increasing demand for hand sanitizers and surface disinfectants while regulators are playing their part in lightening constraints during the Covid-19 coronavirus pandemic. Furthermore, other active drugs are in limited supply, such as alcohols, as the current recession raises competition for the goods. Dozens of chemicals firms have come up to supply finished goods or the ingredients used to produce them. For instance, BASF has reallocated several tons of isopropanol for hand sanitizer production. Dow Chemical has shifted production to an estimated 200 tons of sanitiser a week at five of its plants around the world. Ineos, a European supplier of the two main raw materials required for hand sanitizers – isopropyl alcohol (IPA) and ethanol – has announced plans to develop a UK factory to produce a million disinfectant bottles each month. Dow Chemical, which manufactures isopropyl alcohol, has collaborated with authorities in Michigan and West Virginia, as well as the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the Alcohol and Tobacco Excise and Export Office, and the Homeland Security Department to satisfy regulatory standards to boost production. An expected rising demand shift for domestic and industrial disinfectants would fuel business growth over the next seven years. Over the past few years, the paint industry has seen steady development and is projected to fuel the success of the global economy. They are used for removing unnecessary microorganisms in paints. The boom in the cosmetics industry is expected to raise the global demand for disinfectants dependent on alcohol.
