Report Overview

Absorbent Crepe Paper is a type of paper product designed for its high absorbency and strength. It is typically made from a blend of natural fibers, such as cellulose, which gives it the ability to soak up liquids effectively. The crepe texture, characterized by its crinkled or crinkled appearance, is achieved through a specific manufacturing process that involves the paper being passed through heated rollers, causing it to shrink and create the distinctive wavy pattern. This paper is commonly used in various applications where liquid absorption is necessary, such as in food service for soaking up grease or spills, in industrial settings for cleaning and wiping, and in personal care for makeup removal or as a substitute for traditional tissues.
