Report Overview

A bilge separator is a device used to remove sediment and water from the bottom of a ship. It is mainly composed of water inlet pipe, separator, water outlet pipe and control system. When the ship is sailing at sea, the sediment and water at the bottom will flow into the separator through the water inlet pipe, and then undergo a series of treatments to be separated into water and sediment. Ultimately, the clean water is discharged into the ocean through the outlet pipe, while the sediment is left in the separator to be cleaned up when the ship is in port.
