Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Cannabidiol (CBD) Cosmetics competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. Cannabidiol (CBD) cosmetics refer to skincare and beauty products that contain cannabidiol, a non-psychoactive compound derived from the hemp plant. These products are designed for topical application and are claimed to offer benefits such as anti-inflammatory, antioxidant, and soothing effects for the skin. CBD is typically included in a variety of cosmetic items such as creams, lotions, serums, balms, and oils. The global market for CBD cosmetics has experienced growing interest due to the rising demand for natural and plant-based skincare solutions. Consumers are increasingly turning to products that combine wellness benefits with beauty, and CBD fits this trend by offering a unique blend of therapeutic properties and skincare functionality. The regulatory environment varies by region, with some markets showing openness toward CBD-infused cosmetics while others remain cautious or restrictive. Despite regulatory challenges, many brands are entering the market, using CBD as a differentiating ingredient in their product lines. The popularity of wellness lifestyles, combined with a growing awareness of CBD's potential benefits for skin issues like inflammation, acne, and aging, continues to drive the expansion of this niche sector within the broader beauty industry.

The global Cannabidiol (CBD) Cosmetics market size was estimated at USD 1278.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 20.60% during the forecast period.
