Report Overview

Cefditoren Pivoxil API, or Active Pharmaceutical Ingredient, is a semi-synthetic, third-generation cephalosporin antibiotic. It is derived from the cephalosporin class of antibiotics, which are known for their broad-spectrum activity against a wide range of bacteria. Cefditoren Pivoxil is specifically designed to be effective against both Gram-positive and Gram-negative bacteria, including some strains that have developed resistance to other cephalosporins. The "Pivoxil" component indicates that it is a prodrug, meaning it is inactive in its administered form and is converted into its active form, cefditoren, within the body after ingestion. This conversion enhances the drug's bioavailability and allows for targeted delivery to the site of infection. Cefditoren Pivoxil API is used in the formulation of oral antibiotics for the treatment of various bacterial infections, such as respiratory tract infections, skin infections, and urinary tract infections. Its development and use are subject to strict regulatory guidelines to ensure safety and efficacy.
