Abstracts

Long-term rental apartments are a new form of housing that provide tenants with long-term accommodation options, usually with a lease term of more than one year. Long-term rental apartments are usually managed by real estate developers or professional property management companies, which provide tenants with complete supporting facilities and services, such as 24-hour security, furniture and appliances, cleaning services, etc. Long-term rental apartments are usually located in the city center or near the bustling business district, which is convenient for residents to live and work. The rent is usually higher than that of traditional long-term rental housing, but compared with short-term rental housing such as hotels, the price of long-term rental apartments is more affordable. At the same time, long-term rental apartments also provide more stable and reliable housing options, suitable for those who need to live for a long time, such as migrant workers, international students, professionals, etc.

The global Centralized Long Term Rental Apartment Rental Service market size was estimated at USD 85542.3 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.25% during the forecast period.
