Report Overview

Corrugated base paper and containerboard paper are two types of packaging materials primarily used in the production of corrugated boxes and other paper-based containers. These papers are characterized by their high strength, durability, and ability to withstand various environmental conditions. Corrugated base paper is a heavier, thicker paper that forms the fluting or wavy middle layer of a corrugated board, providing structural support and cushioning properties. It is typically made from a blend of recycled and virgin fibers, and its production involves a complex process that includes pulping, pressing, and drying. Containerboard paper, on the other hand, is a smooth, strong paper used for the outer layers of corrugated boxes and other packaging materials. It is designed to resist moisture, provide a clean surface for printing, and offer excellent stacking strength. Containerboard is often made from a combination of wood pulp and recycled fibers, ensuring sustainability and cost-effectiveness. Both types of paper play a crucial role in the packaging industry, ensuring the protection and preservation of goods during transportation and storage.
