Report Overview

Decaf Coffee Bean refers to a type of coffee bean that has undergone a process to remove most of its caffeine content, typically ranging from 97% to 99% caffeine reduction. This process is achieved through various methods such as the Swiss Water Process, Solvent Process, or Carbon Dioxide Process, which extract caffeine from the beans without significantly affecting their flavor profile. The resulting decaffeinated beans are then roasted and ground to produce decaf coffee, which offers a similar taste and aroma to regular coffee but with significantly less caffeine. This product caters to individuals who enjoy the sensory experience of coffee but wish to avoid the stimulating effects of caffeine, making it an ideal choice for those sensitive to caffeine or who consume coffee later in the day.
