Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Educational Interactive Tablet competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. In 2024, the global production of interactive tablets for education will reach 1.67 million units, with an average selling price of US$3000 per unit. Educational interactive tablets are a type of smart terminal device designed specifically for educational settings, such as schools and training institutions. They integrate large-screen, high-definition displays, multi-touch technology, smart writing, wireless projection, and interactive teaching software. They replace traditional projectors, blackboards, and whiteboards, supporting real-time interaction between teachers and students and the presentation of multimedia content. Compared to office-grade interactive tablets, educational interactive tablets emphasize teaching adaptability and classroom management features, such as annotation and saving, question bank push, homework assignments, remote classes, and group interaction. These enhance classroom engagement and participation, while supporting access to smart campus platforms and data analytics, facilitating targeted teaching and personalized learning. They have become a crucial hardware foundation for smart education. Driven by the "double reduction" policy, the trend toward educational informatization, and distance education, demand for educational interactive tablets continues to expand, gradually moving towards larger screens, thinner and lighter designs, AI-powered devices, and cloud-based platforms. Their application has also expanded beyond K-12 classrooms to encompass higher education, vocational education, and online education and training.

The global Educational Interactive Tablet market size was estimated at USD 5013.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of
