Abstracts

To address the problems of high costs, limited channels, and restricted viewing options associated with traditional film distribution, film distribution platforms have emerged. Since the early 21st century, with the innovation of internet technology and the rise of streaming models, the film distribution field has undergone a profound transformation. Currently, film distribution platforms have developed into a core hub that integrates various models such as simultaneous theatrical release, streaming premieres, on-demand rentals, and multi-window distribution. They are widely used in global cinemas, home entertainment, mobile terminals, and integrated online and offline scenarios, significantly expanding film distribution reach, optimizing distribution efficiency, and reshaping the audience's consumption experience. Film distribution platforms are undergoing a transformation from "channel is king" to a three-pronged approach of "content + technology + users." In the future, with the deepening application of 5G, AI, and blockchain technologies, platforms will need to find a balance between globalization and localization, commercial value and cultural dissemination, and technological innovation and regulatory compliance to drive sustainable industry growth.

The global Film Distribution Platform market size was estimated at USD 933.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.20% during the forecast period.
