Report Overview

Flurbiprofen API (Active Pharmaceutical Ingredient) is a nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drug (NSAID) used primarily for its analgesic, anti-inflammatory, and antipyretic properties. It functions by inhibiting cyclooxygenase (COX) enzymes, thereby reducing prostaglandin synthesis, which is responsible for pain and inflammation. The API is widely incorporated into oral tablets, topical gels, and ophthalmic solutions to treat conditions such as rheumatoid arthritis, osteoarthritis, postoperative pain, and sore throat. Due to its efficacy and relatively lower gastrointestinal side effects compared to other NSAIDs, Flurbiprofen API holds a significant position in the pharmaceutical market, particularly in pain management and anti-inflammatory formulations. Its synthesis involves complex chemical processes, ensuring high purity and compliance with stringent pharmacopeial standards, making it a critical component in both branded and generic drug manufacturing.
