Report Overview

Ginkgo Biloba Leaf Extract Injection is a sterile solution derived from the leaves of the Ginkgo biloba tree, standardized to contain active compounds such as flavonoids and terpenoids, which are known for their antioxidant, anti-inflammatory, and vasodilatory properties. Primarily used in clinical settings, this injectable form is administered intravenously to treat conditions like cerebral insufficiency, peripheral vascular disorders, and cognitive decline by improving blood circulation and protecting neural tissues. Its pharmacological effects stem from its ability to modulate platelet aggregation, scavenge free radicals, and enhance microcirculation. The product is regulated as a prescription drug in many markets, requiring strict adherence to manufacturing and quality control standards to ensure efficacy and safety. Given its therapeutic applications, demand is driven by an aging population, increasing prevalence of neurodegenerative diseases, and growing awareness of alternative treatments in integrative medicine.
