Abstracts

1 Amino 2 Fluorobenzene, also known as 2-fluoroaniline or o-fluoroaniline, is a halogenated aniline derivative characterized by the presence of an amino group (-NH2) and a fluorine atom at ortho positions on the benzene ring. This structural configuration imparts unique electronic and steric properties, making it a versatile intermediate in organic synthesis. It is primarily utilized in the pharmaceutical industry for the development of active pharmaceutical ingredients (APIs), particularly in the synthesis of compounds with enhanced bioavailability and metabolic stability due to the fluorine substituent. Additionally, it serves as a key building block in agrochemicals for producing herbicides and pesticides, as well as in the manufacture of dyes, pigments, and specialty polymers where its electron-withdrawing fluorine group influences reactivity and material properties. The compound is typically synthesized through diazotization and fluorination processes or via direct amination of fluorinated precursors, and it requires careful handling due to its toxicity and potential environmental hazards.

The global 1 Amino 2 Fluorobenzene market size was estimated at USD 95.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.80% during the forecast period.
