Abstracts

A2 milk is a variety of cows' milk that mostly lacks a form of β -casein proteins called A1, and instead has mostly the A2 form. Since The a2 Milk Company launched A2 milk products, A2 milk is being marketed as a healthier choice compared to regular milk. Pasteurization is a process that slows microbial growth in food. Pasteurization is not intended to kill all pathogenic micro-organisms in the food or liquid, but aims to reduce the number of viable pathogens so they are unlikely to cause disease. Pasteurized Milk is also considered as healthier choice as it contains more vitamins and active compounds than other processed milks, e.g. UHT milk. The A2 pasteurized milk market size is determined by consumer preferences and their willingness. Factors such as increased health consciousness, lactose intolerance, and growing awareness of the potential benefits of A2-casein milk can drive demand. On the other side, number of farms and farmers producing A2-casein milk, technological advancements in breeding A2-casein cows, and processing facilities constrain market supply. The presence and strength of competitors in the market impact its size. Competition can arise from other types of milk (e.g., A1-casein, plant-based alternatives), pricing strategies of competitors, and marketing efforts to promote A2-casein fresh milk.

The global A2 Pasteurized Milk market size was estimated at USD 480.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.70% during the forecast period.
