Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Active Folate Supplement competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. In 2024, global Active Folate Supplement production reached approximately 13,913.6 K units, with an average global market price of around US$ 16.2 per unit. Active folate supplements are dietary supplements that provide folate in its bioavailable, metabolically active form, most commonly as L-5-methyltetrahydrofolate (L-5-MTHF). Unlike synthetic folic acid, which requires enzymatic conversion in the body to become biologically active, active folate supplements bypass this process, offering immediate availability for crucial physiological functions such as DNA synthesis, cell division, and methylation reactions. These supplements are particularly beneficial for individuals with genetic variations (like MTHFR mutations) that impair folic acid metabolism, as well as for pregnant women, those with certain health conditions, and people seeking enhanced absorption and efficacy. Active folate supplements support healthy neural development, cardiovascular function, and overall cellular health, making them a preferred choice in personalized nutrition, prenatal care, and clinical supplementation.

The global Active Folate Supplement market size was estimated at USD 225.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.80% during the forecast period.
