Report Overview

An Alcohol Breath Tester is a portable electronic device designed to estimate blood alcohol concentration (BAC) by analyzing the alcohol content in a person's breath. It operates by using a fuel cell sensor or semiconductor sensor technology to detect the presence of ethanol vapors exhaled by the user. The device is typically compact and easy to use, requiring the user to blow into a mouthpiece for a short period. The tester then calculates and displays the BAC level, which can help individuals determine if they are fit to drive or operate machinery safely. It is important to note that while these devices can provide a quick estimation, they are not as accurate as professional-grade breathalyzers used by law enforcement and should not be relied upon as a definitive measure of intoxication.
