Abstracts

Alternative accommodation refers to non-traditional lodging options that serve as substitutes for conventional hotels, including vacation rentals (e.g., Airbnb, Vrbo), homestays, serviced apartments, hostels, boutique inns, glamping sites, and other privately-owned or uniquely curated properties offering short-term stays. This market has expanded significantly due to digital platforms enabling property owners to list and monetize underutilized spaces, while travelers increasingly seek personalized, cost-effective, and locally immersive experiences. Its growth is driven by consumer demand for flexibility, variety, and value, as well as technological advancements in booking systems, mobile accessibility, and trust mechanisms like user reviews and verification processes.
