Report Overview

Aluminium composite sheet is a type of flat panel that consists of two thin aluminium sheets bonded to a non-aluminium core, typically made of polyethylene (PE) or mineral-filled material. This construction results in a lightweight yet durable material that is commonly used in the construction industry for external cladding, facades, and signage due to its weather resistance, ease of fabrication, and aesthetic appeal. The versatility of aluminium composite sheets also extends to interior design applications such as partitions, false ceilings, and furniture. With a wide range of colors, finishes, and textures available in the market, aluminium composite sheets offer architects and designers creative freedom in their projects.
