Abstracts

Endografts are medical implants used to treat aneurysms ? ballooning of the vessel wall due to structural weakness. The endograft is a fabric-covered metallic stent that is inserted into an abdominal aortic aneurysm without need for a surgical approach and its resulting side effects. A significant driver in the aortic endografts market is the aging global population and the associated increase in aortic aneurysms and related conditions. Aortic endografts offer minimally invasive solutions for treating aortic diseases, catering to the rising demand for less invasive procedures among elderly patients. However, a notable challenge in this market is the need for precise patient selection and sizing of endografts to ensure proper fit and effectiveness. The complexity of anatomical variations among patients can make the selection and deployment of endografts challenging, requiring advanced imaging techniques and expertise. Ensuring optimal patient outcomes while navigating these complexities remains a critical challenge in the aortic endografts market.

The global Aortic Endografts market size was estimated at USD 3165.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.90% during the forecast period.
