Report Overview

Argileh tobacco, also known as shisha or hookah tobacco, is a flavored tobacco product primarily used in water pipes for social and recreational smoking. Unlike traditional cigarettes, it is moist and sticky, often mixed with molasses, honey, or glycerin to enhance flavor and smoke production. The tobacco is heated indirectly using charcoal, producing thick, aromatic smoke that is filtered through water before inhalation. Argileh tobacco comes in a wide variety of flavors, including fruit, mint, and spice blends, catering to diverse consumer preferences. Its usage is deeply rooted in Middle Eastern culture but has gained global popularity, particularly in cafes and lounges, where communal smoking is a social activity. While often perceived as a less harmful alternative to cigarettes, health concerns persist due to nicotine content and potential exposure to toxicants from prolonged smoking sessions. The product is subject to varying regulations worldwide, with some markets imposing restrictions on flavors, packaging, and public consumption.

The global Argileh Tobacco market size was estimated at USD 300.83 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.25% during the forecast period.
