Report Overview

Asset-based lending (ABL) is a specialized form of financing where loans are secured by collateral, typically accounts receivable, inventory, equipment, or other business assets. This type of lending provides liquidity to businesses—often those with fluctuating cash flows or weaker credit profiles—by leveraging their tangible assets as security, allowing lenders to mitigate risk while offering borrowers access to working capital. ABL is particularly prevalent in industries with high asset turnover, such as manufacturing, wholesale, retail, and distribution, as well as in turnaround situations where traditional financing may be unavailable. The flexibility of ABL structures—including revolving credit lines and term loans—makes it a versatile solution for companies seeking growth funding, debt refinancing, or operational stability. Market demand for ABL has grown as businesses face tighter bank lending standards and economic uncertainty, with non-bank lenders and private credit firms increasingly playing a significant role in the space. The global ABL market is projected to expand further, driven by the need for alternative financing options and the increasing sophistication of risk assessment tools that enable lenders to better evaluate collateral value.

The global Asset Based Lending market size was estimated at USD 12513.75 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.25% during the forecast period.
