Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Atropine Sulfate API competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations.Atropine sulfate API is a key active ingredient of anticholinergic drugs. Its core mechanism of action is to inhibit the muscarinic effect of acetylcholine by competitively blocking M cholinergic receptors, thereby exerting pharmacological effects such as relieving smooth muscle spasms, inhibiting glandular secretion, mydriasis and accommodative paralysis. In clinical applications, this API is widely used to prepare a variety of pharmaceutical preparations, such as atropine sulfate injection, tablets and eye drops, etc., for the treatment of visceral colic, pre-anesthetic administration, mydriasis optometry, and rescue of organophosphorus pesticide poisoning. In terms of pharmacokinetics, atropine sulfate API shows the characteristics of rapid oral absorption, bioavailability of about 80%, and half-life of about 2.5 hours. After absorption, the drug is widely distributed in tissues throughout the body and can pass through the blood-brain barrier and placental barrier.The current status of the development of atropine sulfate APIs shows the characteristics of steady growth in market scale, continuous technological upgrading and strict policy supervision. Dynamically, it is moving towards efficiency and personalization and facing the pressure of global competition. At present, with the increasing aging of the global population and the rising incidence of chronic diseases, the demand for atropine sulfate APIs is increasing year by year, and the market scale continues to expand. Especially in developing countries, due to the improvement of medical conditions and the improvement of people's living standards, its clinical application has been widely promoted; in terms of technology, the API has been significantly improved in purity and stability, and some new products also use intelligent packaging and remote monitoring
