Report Overview

Avocado oil is a nutrient-rich oil extracted from the pulp of the avocado fruit (Persea americana). It is valued for its high content of monounsaturated fatty acids, antioxidants, vitamins (particularly vitamin E), and phytochemicals, making it suitable for culinary, cosmetic, and therapeutic applications. Unlike many other oils, avocado oil has a high smoke point, which makes it ideal for cooking at high temperatures, such as frying and sautéing. In addition, its emollient properties support skincare, haircare, and cosmetic formulations. Due to increasing consumer preference for natural, functional, and organic products, avocado oil has seen rising demand across food, personal care, and pharmaceutical industries.
