Report Overview

Ketone bodies are the water-soluble molecules mainly produced in the liver by the oxidation of fatty acids. Increasing concentrations of ketone in the blood may lead to metabolic acidosis or ketosis. That has been associated with a growth hormone deficiency, inborn errors of metabolism, childhood hypo-glycaemia, diabetes and alcohol or salicylate intoxication. β -Hydroxybutyrate is the most abundant of the ketone bodies in the blood (~78%). The blood ketone body can be measured and monitored by the quantification of predominant β -Hydroxybutyrate in the blood by using the β -Hydroxybutyrate (ketone body) assay kits. There have been various types of β -Hydroxybutyrate (ketone body) assay kits developed for the measurement of β -Hydroxybutyrate in various biological samples such as tissue extracts, plasma, serum, cell lysates and urine. Patients can go for the β -Hydroxybutyrate (Ketone Body) testing by using β -Hydroxybutyrate (ketone body) assay kits if they have symptoms like dehydration, increased urination, rapid breathing, excessive thirst, nausea, shortness of breath and vomiting.
