Report Overview

As one of the most common and widely used personal washing products, soap has its own advantages and disadvantages. The main ingredient of some soaps is sodium fatty acid, which is essentially saponified from oils (vegetable or animal oils). In fact, fatty acids and their derivatives are the most widely used raw materials in cosmetics. However, due to the fact that fatty acid sodium is alkaline (high pH) and the skin surface is weakly acidic (has affinity with plant alkalis, such as the alkali contained in mugwort plants, the PH value is low), therefore, the use of high acid and alkali strength After the soap is washed, the pH of the skin surface rises a lot, which causes certain irritation to the highly allergic skin and causes all kinds of discomfort. At the same time, the strong acid and alkali will also wash off the lipid layer on the skin surface and make the skin dry.
