Abstracts

Baby biodegradable diapers are an eco-conscious alternative to conventional disposable diapers, designed to address the growing environmental concerns associated with traditional diaper waste. These diapers are manufactured using materials that break down more rapidly and safely in composting environments, such as plant-based fibers (e.g., bamboo, cornstarch, or wood pulp), biodegradable plastics, and water-soluble components, reducing their long-term impact on landfills. Unlike standard diapers, which can take centuries to decompose and contribute significantly to plastic pollution, biodegradable options are engineered to degrade within a few months to a few years under appropriate conditions, though their effectiveness often depends on access to industrial composting facilities. The product aims to balance functionality?absorbency, comfort, and leak protection?with sustainability, appealing to environmentally aware parents seeking to minimize their household?s ecological footprint without compromising on convenience or performance.

The global Baby Biodegradable Diaper market size was estimated at USD 2350.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.15% during the forecast period.
