Abstracts

Benazepril hydrochloride is an angiotensin-converting enzyme (ACE) inhibitor primarily prescribed for the management of hypertension and congestive heart failure, often marketed under brand names like Lotensin. It functions by inhibiting the conversion of angiotensin I to angiotensin II, resulting in vasodilation and reduced blood pressure. The drug is available in both branded and generic formulations, with generics dominating the market due to patent expirations. The global market for benazepril hydrochloride is mature and largely influenced by the prevalence of cardiovascular diseases, aging populations, and increasing hypertension cases worldwide. Key market drivers include rising healthcare awareness, improved access to medications in developing regions, and the cost-effectiveness of generic alternatives. However, the market faces constraints such as the emergence of newer antihypertensive drug classes (e.g., ARBs and combination therapies), stringent regulatory requirements, and potential side effects associated with ACE inhibitors. Geographically, North America and Europe hold significant market shares due to well-established healthcare systems and high diagnosis rates, while Asia-Pacific is emerging as a high-growth region driven by expanding healthcare infrastructure and growing patient populations. Competition is intense among generic manufacturers, with pricing pressures and regulatory compliance playing critical roles in market dynamics.

The global Benazepril Hydrochloride market size was estimated at USD 520.75 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.20% during the forecast period.
