Report Overview

Bentonite waterproof blanket is a type of geosynthetic clay liner (GCL) that is used to create a watertight barrier in a variety of applications, including landfills, ponds, canals, and foundations. It is made of a layer of sodium bentonite sandwiched between two non-woven geotextiles.

When bentonite comes into contact with water, it swells and forms a gel-like substance that seals off the pores in the soil, preventing water from passing through. Bentonite waterproof blankets are also self-healing, meaning that if they are punctured or torn, the bentonite will swell and seal the damage.
