Abstracts

Blockchain messaging apps are decentralized communication platforms that leverage distributed ledger technology to offer enhanced security, privacy, and censorship resistance compared to traditional messaging services. These applications typically employ end-to-end encryption, store messages on a blockchain or decentralized network to prevent tampering or unauthorized access, and often integrate cryptocurrency wallets or token-based incentives to reward users for participation or data sovereignty. By eliminating centralized servers, they aim to protect user metadata, resist surveillance, and ensure message permanence without reliance on a single controlling entity, positioning themselves as tools for secure, private, and trustless digital communication.

The global Blockchain Messaging Apps market size was estimated at USD 180.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 22.75% during the forecast period.
