Abstracts

Report Overview

Botanical supplements include fresh or dried products in different forms, such as tablets, capsules, powders, and tea bags. Globally, garlic, ginger, santalum, plantago, ginseng, rhodiola extract, red clover extract, and soy extract are some of the most widely used botanical supplements.

Rising awareness among consumers regarding the health benefits associated with consumption of botanical supplements such as holy basil extract, which helps in reduction of anxiety is a major factor expected to drive growth in demand for botanical supplements. Owing to increasing advertisements and easy availability of botanical supplements over the counter, demand for these supplements is increasing. Currently, consumers are more inclined towards self-medication due to rising penetration of internet and social media. These factors are expected to drive growth of the market for botanical supplements globally over the forecast period.
